Study Abroad — Postcards from China
During Summer 2015, AE Associate Professor Moses Ling is accompanying AE students for a seven-week China Study Abroad program. AE students, Brendan Barrett, Brianna Basile, Alexander Boots, Lauren Boyle, Megan Farrell, Joe Hacker, Lukas Hoffman, David Kinsley, Amy Pennebacker, Abbey Scanlon, Aaron Shapiro and Penn Whitlow are participating in the 12-credit program that includes architectural design, study of Chinese urbanization, and building project case studies offered jointly by the University of Hong Kong and the Tsinghua University Summer School for International Construction in Beijing. Most lectures involve site visits to different architectural buildings in China. In addition, the program includes the opportunity for students to visit Shanghai to meet with various U.S. firms and businesses involved in development projects.

Students from a number of universities in Asia, Australia and the United States regularly participate in this international/intercultural experience. The program offers a unique academic and cultural experience with a rich historical perspective on this beautiful country.

About the above photo, Ling said, "Most of those kids just happened to be visiting Tsinghua University from another location in China. As with many Chinese tourists they asked to have a picture with us!"
